

Milan Fashion Week Spring/Summer 2011: Emilio Pucci

Because there hasn't been enough Seventies-inspired floaty, hippie garments this fashion week season (joking!) Emilio Pucci put a glamorous stamp on the idea. Sexy psychedelic prints stormed the runway in this globe-trotting collection by Peter Dundas. Featuring blues and whites of the Greek islands, floor-sweeping dresses, casual summer separates, blazers, flared trousers, romantic ruffles, and cut-away maxis, this collection is for the woman on a mission. In dressing up or down, Dundas also threw in handcrafted sandals and over-the-knee thigh high suede boots. Click play on the video above to watch the show.

Olivia Palermo (and her boyfriend) land Mango campaign

Joining Scarlett Johansson on the Mango payroll is Olivia Palermo. The star of MTV's The City will star alongside her hunky boyfriend, model Johannes Huebl in the new ads.

"I was [shy working with Johannes] at first, it was really embarrassing - but then I remembered it was just him and I could just be normal - so then it was really fun," she told Vogue UK.

While at the Matthew Williamson show last week, Palermo also revealed that they will be appearing with Johansson and Poppy Delevingne. "I haven't seen [Poppy] since the shoot so I can't wait to see her this week". Then the pair went on to sit next to each other at Williamson's show.

Milan Fashion Week Spring/Summer 2011: Emporio Armani

With face of Emporio Armani, Megan Fox, sitting front row, Giorgio Armani's S/S '11 show started strong with models teaming out wearing blazers over striped dresses with tulle skirts. From there the tailoring continued in shorts, silk trousers, and gauze jackets in a palette of mostly mineral colours, e.g. quartz grey, sandy beige, flashes of green, and black. Relaxed layering was another key feature, with sporty tailcoats, sheath leggings, decorative necklaces, and T-shirt dressing. Evening looks went slightly dramatic with flared skirts, straight necklines and thin shoulder straps.

12 Days of Chic-mas

2007 - A Year in Fashion

Up there in my top 3 London Fashion Week shows, Falguni and Shane Peacock's Spring/Summer 2011 show had it all.

From graphic print floaty maxis to hard-wear studded body con dresses there was something for every occasion. Armour was a common theme throughout the collection with metal plates featuring on shoulder pads, bra cups, belts and even knee pads on trousers. Graphic prints had a certain organic look about them and with the collection taking inspiration from animals 'under the threat of extinction' prints resembled scales, bees and tiger stripes.

A particular favourite of mine was a yellow and black graphic print body with oversized studded Perspex shoulder pads, simply teamed with sheer black tights and lace-up black ankle boots. Not necessarily what I'd chose to wear for work let's say, but more a piece I'd want to hang on the wall and play dress-up in every now and then perhaps pretending to be a super hero...

Hair was worn down and make-up was kept equally simple with black eyeliner and peach blusher.

Am already finding myself looking forward to what the Indian design duo have in store for us next season. Roll on February Fashion Week!

Fashion Flashback

to design is Claudia Schiffer.

While attending the Salvatore Ferragamo show at Milan Fashion Week, the supermodel revealed to WWD that she plans to unveil her new line with an event next month.

Few other details were released except that her debut collection will launch in time for winter 2011. Going by Schiffer's personal style, which tends to favour classic, sophisticated pieces, we think her line will follow suit.

What do you think? Are you excited by a fashion line from Claudia? Tell us by leaving your comments below.

London Fashion Week S/S 2011: BodyAmr

London Fashion Week S/S 2011: BodyAmr
For a relative new comer to London Fashion Week BodyAmr certainly pulled the cool crowd with Katy Perry and Lilly Allen both in the front row. The vibrant collection flowed down the Catwalk with soft fabrics draped round sculptured bodycons and regal metallic tight fitting tops. Inspired by silver screen goddesses such as Josephine Baker the soft flowing fabrics in pale neutral hues were draped majestically over the female form and contrasted magnificently with bold cobalt blue, silver and my favourite a fresh bright aqua marine. Muse of the moment Daisy Lowe modelled a plunging white draped gown whilst Kanye West's ex, Amber Rose, pulled off a Queen of the Amazon influence beautifully in a long bejewelled dress. The Body Amr catwalk show also featured a capsule collection of seven looks for seven days designed by the lovely TV presenter and model Zara Martin. Hems rose quite high for these little outfits but the colours and fabrics blended perfectly alongside Amr's mainline looks. BodyAmr has already dressed a number of celebrated women including Beyonce, Kylie, Cheryl Cole and Cindy Crawford, with statement designs like the ones featured here the queues are set to continue.

Ashish Spring/Summer 2011 London Fashion week show

I have to admit I had high hopes for the Ashish Spring/Summer 2011 show and was I disappointed? Not in the slightest.

Cowboys and Indians were this season's theme (or to quote the girl next to me; 'Village People on acid'). Models playing dress-up in sequined gingham shirts, fringed trousers and cow print jackets made up one side, while other models were dressed in feathered hats and leopard print sequin dresses. All that were missing were hobby horses, bows and arrows and a sheriff and we'd have had a complete set.

The cowboy boots, both ankle and knee length, deserve a special mention. Each pair were individually embellished or painted with famous American brands including the McDonald's golden arches and a bottle of Coca Cola, or Western symbols such as a cactus or cowboy hat.

To be honest, there's not really much more to say, the clothes speak for themselves so take a look at the gallery below and let me what you think.
